Maximizing a Company's Growth and Value Through Use of Its Knowledge and Inventions™
Managing Intellectual Property Consistent with the Company's Business Plans™

Clients and Friends and the many of you who are both,

Welcome to the November 2008 issue of the PIPS IP Newsletter (contains 318 words, 3 minutes to read):

Now that we know who our next President will be, we will be hearing about his plans for making changes in the Federal government. I have included a number of articles in the attached Domestic section of this e-zine that give some advance views on the President-elect's plans including those for the US Patent and Trademark Office.

In speaking with many clients, potential clients and even some patent attorneys, I learned that there are a number of questions and uncertainties related to the use of provisional patents. One of these uncertainties can lead to losing as much as a year of patent coverage. I have attached a white paper discussing provisional patents, what they are, how they can be used, and their benefits.

There are many news articles related to intellectual property that can benefit many of us whether we are owners or managers of technology companies, attorneys or consultants. Since there are too many to keep track of, I have compiled a list of brief descriptions of news articles with links to the entire articles available in this month's PIPS IP Update Newsletter. (click here). (2)

PIPS works with "C-Level" executives in small to medium size technology companies who want to maximize their company's value and growth through use of its knowledge and inventions. We do this by identifying a company's intellectual property and creating and implementing an intellectual property strategy that is consistent with the company's business plans.

You can learn how much energy your intellectual property can provide by visiting the PIPS' web site.

Please let us know how you like this new format. We appreciate your feedback at suggestions@protectiveIPservices.com
